

Jeremy Scanlan

Board Level Executive Coach

Based in: France

Languages: English, French,
German

Qualifications: MA

Jeremy spent his initial 30 years in business with international high-tech companies in the UK, Germany and France, and his experience has fostered a very practical approach to solving business problems. From 1995 until early 2000, he was Human Resources and Training and Development (T&D) Director for VLSI, later taken over by Philips Semiconductors (now NXP Semiconductors), in Sophia-Antipolis.

Since 2000 he has developed and delivered many different learning programmes including Influencing Skills, Advanced Presentation Skills, Life Design and Career Development, Leadership, Change Management and Project Management in various countries worldwide. The major focus in all these programmes is to improve communication between people, and specifically to enhance leadership skills. Jeremy can deliver programmes and coach in English, French and German.

Qualifications, accreditations and memberships

- MA in Mathematics, Oxford University
- Tri-lingual in English, French and German
- Accredited to administer MBTI® Step I and FIRO-B®.

Selected clients

Ahlstrom
Amadeus
American Express
Astrium-EADS
HSBC
Nikon
Nokia Networks
Philips Medical Philips Semiconductors (now NXP Semiconductors)
Siemens VDO
Texas Instruments.

Coaching style

Jeremy enables people and companies to fulfil their maximum potential, creating beneficial and rewarding interconnections among people of different cultural origins, personalities, backgrounds and environments by furthering individuals' understanding of themselves and others.

Jeremy believes in continuous learning and sharing knowledge, and helps people to focus on what they are good at – for the benefit of themselves and their environment. He has also run several workshops focusing on the multicultural and 'otherness' aspects that are key when several companies integrate into one organisation.